

Gov't doctor wins P1,000 in case that cost P200,000

MANILA (INQUIRER) — A GOVERNMENT DOCTOR who said he spent about P100,000 to perform a laparoscopic cholecystectomy on a 30-year-old woman was awarded P1,000 by the court after he testified he had no recollection of doing the surgery.

Judge Teresita Rosales Galante of the Regional Trial Court, First Circuit Branch 35, in a decision dated May 20, 2007, on a writ of certiorari, said the doctor was guilty of malpractice in the case. The court said the doctor was negligent in not performing the surgery on the patient, who was hospitalized for about 10 days. Cimatu ordered to Iraq to probe Pinoys' plight

By Michael Lim (Star, Cynthia Salinas and Jerome Aning)

PRESIDENT MacArthur's all-night stay extended the term of Ambassador Roy Cimatu's return here to the Middle East to deal with the reported kidnapping of Philippine citizens in Iraq.

Cimatu, the former second floor chief of staff whose term as special envoy to the Middle East should have expired on June 30, left Manila for Kuwait on Monday to begin his posting.

The latest, according to foreign affairs officials, is to verify reports that 34 Filipinos were suddenly snatched into Iraq to work in the construction of the US Embassy in Baghdad, first night, and bring them back to the Philippines.

The President signed Executive Order No. 144 on July 29 extending the life of the Presidential Middle East Independence Commission (PMIEC) up to Dec. 31 to oversee the security and safety of Filipinos working in the Middle East. An additional P5 million was allocated for the PMIEC's report, according to Manila-based.

The decision came after a study conducted before the US Congress that Filipinos work in more than 100 countries and in many conditions on the US Embassy grounds.

Labor Secretary Arseno Briza had said he learned that only 11 Filipinos, not 34, actually were in Iraq, and only three were still there.

In responding to Cimatu's initial report, President Arroyo said he wanted him to investigate and report incidents of the deployment later in Iraq, which was supposed following the seizure of Iraqi oil reserves in 2003.

He said the President will issue an "urgent" and establish a specific contingency plan for such potential crisis in water concerns, and in increased road ways to quickly release the victims from the deployment of Filipinos from Iraq to Iraq's oil fields.

hardly. Sometimes not being too diligent about how to get something done."

"Accenture is an equal opportunity employer. The company believes in what a person brings to the table, what are his competencies? What value is he adding? Does he have the potential to be successful in Accenture?"

Will she live her own values? Being part of a company like Accenture is a very motivating, said Cindy Yip, a former Accenture employee and now a Managing Consultant at Client Services Organization.

Cindy's brother, Douglas, works as a Program Manager at Accenture. And last last February, he joined the Client Services Organization team, and has been working with his sister since then.

"Being only 1 of 2 siblings, our relationship has always been close and candid. I was concerned about the work environment in the beginning, but, as it turned out, we are able to have the same relationship outside professionally as we do in our personal lives. Working with Douglas has given me an opportunity to get to know her even better. Seeing her in action has convinced me and inspired me to be a better me now," Douglas said.

Cindy shared "A typical work day involves my brother picking me up from my house, riding with me to work, discussing the same meetings and consulting each other on work matters, having lunch together and then finally going home together. I think our environment brings a new dimension to our relationship as brother and sister."

I think that by removing the traditional of being siblings in other relationships, Accenture has opened up a potential talent pool. I would be proud of it as Accenture putting value on relationships. As the company, adding a work element may actually make the relationship more profound and meaningful," Douglas added.

The relationship is becoming one for the books. Florida and husband, Mike, are both managers at Accenture Technology Solutions. "My sister-in-law, Carla, is an HR representative and my brother-in-law, Mark Anthony, is with Accenture, global IT consulting specializing in Microsoft enterprise technology and use of Accenture's key alliances. My sister Anna, used to work too for Accenture Consulting (Accenture's previous name) from 1993 to 1997."

According to Liza, seeing how her brother and sister-in-law have been with his influence has been working with Accenture. "One benefit of having relatives in the same company is knowing what's in it for me at Accenture and having someone to guide me," Liza pointed out.

While the siblings are often assigned to different projects, floods and Mike once need to work on the same project, but on different teams. "We had the same schedule and location, which was very convenient for both of us," said Florida.

For the four of them, it is easy to share learning experiences, tips, personalizing techniques, and even help and family. According to Florida, "We have different topics to talk about when driving back home, but the bottom line is I know what he is talking about. Because of it, it's a family. And we have a lot of common friends which is really fun."

The examples of Garry and Anna, Cindy and Douglas, and Florida, Mike, Mark and Liza prove that far from being a hindrance, family members working in the same company can be beneficial to both the employees and the organization. Nurturing an environment rich in diversity, Accenture seeks through and beyond its employees and relationships. The company recognizes each individual's uniqueness, values his or her skills and contributions, and provides ongoing personal advancement and learning. Accenture offers an opportunity for a successful mingling of two worlds, where work family and family can be your most indispensable colleagues. This inclusive culture helps develop new players to become high performers.

Unconventional dry spell

Is there a cause for alarm? Definitely, 'yes!' The observed rainfall in June and July was below normal and the outlook for August is still generally dry

THE DRY SPELL THAT A LARGE PART OF THE COUNTRY HAS BEEN EXPERIENCING over the past two months is unconventional because it is happening at a time when the monsoon season is in its peak. According to the weather bureau, the dry spell is not a cause for alarm because the observed rainfall in June and July was below normal and the outlook for August is still generally dry.

By Erickson P. Tumbales and Susan R. Espinoza

BECAUSE OF THE EL Niño's highly dynamic nature, a small perturbation in rainfall may cause an unprecipitated impact like the dry spell that is happening now. For instance, the failure of the monsoon could impact a delay in the planting season, both rain-fed and irrigated areas and result in low productivity. Likewise, deficit in the water levels of dams can lead to reduced capacity to hydro-power generation and limited supply for irrigation and household use.

Due to its location, the Philippines is exposed to extreme climate and severe weather systems that cause floods and droughts. The country is affected by the monsoon season, which is characterized by 17-month cycles annually and by other severe weather systems such as typhoons, and the historical cold-convergence line (CCL).

'Siyam-siyam'

Tropical cyclones bring rainfall rates about 50 percent and sometimes strike at the season. The traditional monsoon in July is a weather system that usually brings prolonged rains or even droughts. Both parts of the country during the month of July is dependent while the north monsoon or habagat blows from the south and the south monsoon or amihan blows from the north.

The CCL is characterized by the formation of cold air masses and both the convergence of equatorial winds blowing from the northeast and southwest. The CCL originates from Malaysia in June and from March to December.

During the time of the year, the CCL is normally over Central and Southern Luzon and the Monsoon in some cases, the weather system can affect different areas in the country at the same time.

In addition, the intensity, duration and spatial distribution of rainfall can also be influenced by large or planetary scale systems such as the extended low pressure area (ELPA) or high pressure area (HPA) or the monsoon system.

What's happening? The most appropriate question would be "what is happening in the climate?" because the weather is always changing.

Weather systems are not all the same. In fact, they are what we experience every day-to-day from rain to sun and temperature, cloud cover and humidity, and so on.

In the summer, the weather can be cloudy and rainy today and sunny and hot tomorrow (except in the equatorial region where most weather is steady and sunny).

In the winter, the weather can be cloudy and rainy today and sunny and hot tomorrow (except in the equatorial region where most weather is steady and sunny).

Fire

The incidence has increased in Luzon, Mindanao and in some areas in June and July.

Although officially the Philippines is in the rainy season now, in reality, we are experiencing summer-like weather. This makes the environment conducive to fires.

China has been hit by a record rain. In fact, a lot of people, whether overseas or in the Philippines, are experiencing it. In fact, the Philippines is also experiencing it. In fact, the Philippines is also experiencing it.

There are four seasonal regions, which tropical cyclones are most likely to occur. The four regions are the Western Pacific, the Indian Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, and the Southern Ocean.

As a result, it is important to know the weather system that is affecting the Philippines. This is because the weather system that is affecting the Philippines is the same as the weather system that is affecting the Philippines.

As a result, Luzon is suffering from a summer-like weather. The dry spell has brought a lot of problems such as the low water levels in dams, power outages due to the reduced generating capacity of hydroelectric plants, no rain in the amount of water supplied in farms in Central Luzon and headwaters of Metro Manila, and a series of fires in the mountains.

Should the dry spell persist this season, a drought will be declared next month. The world's water resources, longer power outages, outflow of rice and food products. No wonder, people are panicking for water.

Organic farmers battle skepticism

Without the use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides, farmers in New Cordillera are looking forward to healthy crops.

AP/WIDE

Convincing farmers to go organic was not easy especially those who have been influenced by the benefits of synthetic inputs

By Jeffrey M. Tupas
New Cordillera, Bureau of Science

MANY FARMERS IN NEW Cordillera towns in Davao del Norte province still believe that only commercial pesticides and synthetic fertilizers can bring them abundant yield.

Thanks to the advances of pesticides and fertilizers, rice farmers in the province have been exposed to superior rice environment and the health of the people.

The decades-long dependence on these hazardous chemicals has not taken root on the farmers' environment that they have increased yield to new farming opportunities.

For those who dared try the new approaches have no regrets. One farmer is now outgrowing an abundant harvest.

Shift

Wences Lajon, 51, chair of the Maynilad Sustainable Farming Association (MSFA), said their shift to organic agriculture was brought about by the local farming but it is organic give life to the crops. They have all to become influenced by the chemicals' activities of the environment.

Convinced farmers to go organic was not easy especially with those who have been influenced by the benefits of synthetic inputs. Many of his neighbors, he said, were skeptical.

Environmental concerns was also not a major consideration for the farmers. The lack of understanding about the effects of the chemicals on the health of the people and the environment is one of the reasons these farmers remain pesticide-dependent.

Garden

For Lajon, changing from the main rice plants to the alternative method was a puzzle. "It appeared that the reaction was a little difficult given that the soil in his farm became and because of long exposure to the chemicals."

"Only land with our long back will not be the soil of the soil," he said. "What helped the soil was the use of animal waste mixed with rice hull. The improved state of his farm has become a source of pride for him and his family. The farmer promised to share a book party after "it will be a good day for right inside the farm," he added.

Lajon, though a younger farmer, admitted he was not sure about what to prepare for the first with his new working system. One of the pillars, he said, will be to be healthy.

It is not enough to the soil but to the health of the farm that is now back with rice and rice. It is not enough to the soil but to the health of the farm that is now back with rice and rice. It is not enough to the soil but to the health of the farm that is now back with rice and rice.

This system simply requires a farmer to prepare a minor dish (farming) made of rice and a 100 square meter of rice. This method is different from conventional rice farming because it does properly, the farmer will not be of rice.

The nature of the soil and the rice will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice.

During the process, the farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice.

each member for each year that goes into the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice.

Benefits

The rice was acquired through the long history of the Institute of Primary Health Care (IPHC), a non-profit organization, in cooperation with the local government of New Cordillera.

Established in 1979 as a community service area of the Davao Medical School Foundation (DMSF), IPHC aims to provide primary health care and address problems in the community. Health, low income brought about by low rice production, and lack of livelihood and credit opportunities.

Lajon said their group was currently outgrowing others in rice and rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice.

"I have been working on it and I know the value of the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice."

Hybrid rice as alternative

THE CHIEF OF THE Philippine Rice Station (PHRS), Manila, has urged Davao farmers to abandon their traditional farming method and plant hybrid rice instead.

PHRS Director, Dr. Philip Reyes, said during a recent visit to the province, he urged Davao farmers to abandon their traditional farming method and plant hybrid rice instead.

Alternative

Traditional farming methods should be abandoned and farmers should learn how to use technology and advanced tools to help them yield more rice.

Reyes said that the use of hybrid rice is a better alternative to the traditional rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice. The farmer will be the same as the rice.

Every Drop Counts !

The National Water Resources Board is set to reduce by August 15, 2000 the daily raw water allocation in Metro Manila from 41 cubic meters per second (CMS) to 39 CMS due to the continued drop in the Angat Dam water level arising from the abnormally low rainfall over the past months.

This will, in turn, reduce the daily water production of Maynilad Water's La Mesa Treatment Plants 1 and 2 by 15 % (from the average daily production of 3200 million liters a day (MLD) to 2710 MLD).

First to be affected are those living in elevated areas of Maynilad's West Zone.

To help affected customers, Maynilad will provide water banking service to waterless areas, put up additional water tanks, and make valve adjustments to isolate and maximize available water. Leak repairs and the cutting off of illegal connections are also being intensified. Delinquent accounts, reaching 60 days will also be immediately disconnected.

Meanwhile, Maynilad customers are advised to practice water conservation measures, including the recycling of water.

The Basics

Always make sure that all faucets are tightly closed. A tap left running wastes 300 liters of water every 5 minutes. Check for leaks regularly and repair immediately. Recycle water. Use the rinse water from washing clothes or dishes for flushing the toilet, cleaning the car, watering plants, or watering lawns.

In The Laundry

When washing by hand: Soak heavily soiled clothes first to remove dirt easily. Use a basin or wastebowl with the right amount of water. Don't let the basin overflow under a running tap. When washing by machine: Wash with a full load only every other day. Use only the necessary amount of detergent so that less rinsing is required.

In The Kitchen

Soak greasy plates first in hot water. Wash slightly greasy items first before the greasier ones. (Don't use running water to soak, rinse and rinse your dishes or to rinse fruits/vegetables. Instead, use a basin or fill up the sink halfway. If you must use the tap, turn it on only when you are ready to rinse.)

Do not throw frozen food under a running tap. Bring out frozen food early enough to bring room temperature before cooking. Use only the right amount of water to cook food.

In The Garden

Water your plants, garden or lawn early in the morning, late in the afternoon, or during the cool part of the day. Don't water during windy days or at high noon. Don't operate water sprinklers during the warmest parts of the day; half the water will only evaporate. Don't water too often. Grass does not need a lot of water. Mow your lawn with water. Mow your lawn with water. Mow your lawn with water.

In The Garage

When washing your car, use a pail, not a water hose, and a cotton rag instead of a sponge. Not only does this save water, a cotton rag is also gentler to your car's surface. Don't hose down your driveway (use a water pail and brush instead). Also, minimize the number of times you wash your car.

In The Bathroom

In using the toilet, avoid unnecessary flushing. One flushing uses up to 20 liters of water. Place toilet in a water-filled and sealed plastic bottle inside the toilet tank, to reduce the amount of water being flushed.

In bathing, use a pail and a dipper (bowl) instead of the shower. If you must use the shower, turn off the water while you are soaping and shampooing and don't stay under the shower longer than necessary when rinsing. If you must use the bathtub, don't leave it full of water.

Turn off the tap while washing shaving or brushing your teeth. Use a glass of water to gargle. Use only about 1/2 liter of water from the tap to rinse your toilet bowl or toilet. This saves about 80% of the water normally used.

It's business as usual after Muntinlupa city hall fire

By John M. Rumbia

AMID THE BLACKSMOKE BOOMERS OF Muntinlupa City Hall, Mayor Dennis Iñigo Pineda gave city officials some mending or cheer. Even smoke operations came Monday morning.

In an emergency meeting with department heads early yesterday, San Pedro discussed the location of the mayor's and vice mayor's offices to the ground floor of the People's Center, one of the three buildings in the City Hall compound.

A three-hour fire on Friday afternoon caused all but two offices in the city hall building, causing two firefighters and three civilians.

One-stop shop

The treasury, accounting, city engineer and budget offices would be set up as one-stop shop also in the People's Center to avoid duplication in operations.

The Muntinlupa City Police Station, which was beside City Hall, will be temporarily moved to the Annex building, the chief of police in the compound.

The documents will be transferred to the Treasurer/Chief of Staff, San Pedro said.

The mayor and committee offices would be set up in Barangay Malabon in adjacent compound in the City Hall compound.

"While we can't really leave City Hall, we are trying to ensure the offices will function as normally as possible," the mayor said in a phone interview.

The fire spread through nine floors in the subdivisions behind City Hall before the flames eventually reached the building.

The blaze destroyed the building's second floor where the mayor's office was located. Only two offices were spared—the treasury and the city engineer's office on the ground floor.

Tinuing was 'suspect'

San Pedro ordered the city fire and police departments to thoroughly investigate the blaze, saying its timing was "suspect."

He said the fire may have been intentionally set, although he refused to elaborate.

"It's pretty unusual... only two municipalities, city administrator (Edmundo) Buntis was shot, and now our city hall flame down," San Pedro said.

San Pedro was shot and wounded in his SUV on the evening of July 24 in three minutes in a motorcycle. He remains in a hospital.

San Pedro ordered Muntinlupa residents that important documents like birth certificates, marriage licenses, land titles and the building's computer server were spared in the fire.

"We will be able to reconstruct our records," he said.

The mayor ordered city engineers leader and Captain to speed up plans for a new City Hall to be built in Barangay Malabon in District of District of Muntinlupa.

Damage in Pineda's fire was estimated at P100 million.

San Pedro said he would seek assistance from Muntinlupa to restore operations at City Hall this week.

HOMESCHOOL LIFESTYLE

Learning moments outside the classroom

By Stephanie S. Amador

IMAGINE A SCHOOL WHERE every moment of a child's waking hours can be turned into a "learning moment."

• where the teacher, who works without pay in an all-day,

• where classes are not scheduled on a set time as in a school;

• where you spend only P14,700 for tuition, plus P1,500 for miscellaneous fees and around P1,000 for textbooks a year; and

• where students spend an average of only three to five hours in the "classroom," depending on their grade level.

Not if you're a student of the Catholic Filipino Academy, based in Quezon City, the CFA, founded last year by Catholic lay preacher and homeschooling author Fr. Sanchez, a homeschooler proponent who caters to parents and children who are homeschoolers.

Composed of a team of "Home Gardeners"—people with firsthand experience in teaching their children at home—a CFA offers lesson plans, textbooks and a support group to parents who have decided to take on the daunting, yet rewarding task of educating their children themselves.

Rose Velasco, CFA assistant director and Maestra Salas, CFA vice-director for curriculum,

"LEARNING takes place 24/7, not only during 'class' hours," says Velasco.

PARENTS who want to teach their children at home can choose from seven home-study programs that are being offered by schools or organizations.

Beginner's guide to homeschooling

By Stephanie K. Asanovic

ALTHOUGH HOMESCHOOLING IS COMMONED by many as a new phenomenon, it has been practiced for several centuries. Home-taught learners who were home-schooled are pilgrims: Albert Einstein, pioneer Leonardo da Vinci, composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, US President Martin Luther King and others C.E. Lewis.

In 1967, Robert Rhea, a 15-year-old homeschooler from Berkeley, New York, won the home-schooling movement from the United States when she won the National Spelling Bee. Another 13-year-old homeschooler, David Field of South Carolina, won the National Geography Bee in 1989. The following year, 12-year-old George Thompson from Missouri, also a homeschooler, won first prize in the National Spelling Bee and second place in the National Geography Bee.

These children's impressive achievements conspicuously generated a lot of interest in the home study movement.

At present, homeschooling is practiced in several countries, including Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and France.

Growing annually

In the United States, where homeschooling is legal in all 50 states, it was estimated in 2001 that there were between 1.2 million and 1.7 million children who were being taught at home by their parents. Although the figures accounted for only three to four percent of the population of the country's schoolchildren, it was noted that the number of home-taught children was growing annually by 12 percent.

Some of the reasons why parents who opted to homeschool their children were dissatisfaction with the public school system, negative peer pressure, religious, cultural or political beliefs and a desire to see schools and to avoid changing family life.

The home-schooling movement has also caught on in the Philippines although there is no official figure on the number of home-schooled students. In recent years, several schools or groups have put up home study programs for parents who want to be personally responsible for their children's education.

Inside from the Catholic Filipino Academy, Inc., in 7550909, the Colegio de San Juan de los Rios, 0277003 local (1) in Manila offers a home study program for elementary and high school students.

Self-learning modules

According to Marcela Llaneta, program coordinator, they provide the students with self-learning modules which they study at home, either by themselves or with their parents.

Students are assigned to come to school at least once a week to take a test which will show whether or not they have mastered their lessons. They are given a grade after completing all the lessons in a subject.

Suzette de los Reyes, the principal of the school's elementary and high school levels, said that the home study program begin in 2002.

"I started in high school because a lot of students inquired about whether it would be possible for them not to attend classes regularly, mainly because of their illnesses. Our notes suggested that Leticia adopt the home study program of our sister school, Angelesan," she said.

The school charges its students P50,000 a year. Enrollment is open throughout the year.

The Living Heritage Academy (029241), the home-schooled department of the School of Tomorrow Philippines in Barangay San Roque, Marikina City, has 1,000 students.

The best teacher

Reina Canales, LHA director, said that they require parents to be personally involved in their children's education "because we believe that the best teacher for kids is their mother or father."

The LHA home-schooled program is open to preschool (Kindergarten 1 and 2), elementary and high school students.

Students pay a one-time P15,000 enrollment fee and a P1,500 registration fee for the 12-year home-schooled program.

There is a one-time fee of P1,000 for students in the preschool and elementary levels, P1,500 for first-year high school students and P4,000 for fourth-year high school students.

The school helps its teachers with students and their parents through e-mail, phone calls and home visits.

At The Master's Academy Home School in Mandaluyong City (0209412) to (21), parents who want to teach their children at home must be a college graduate and should not be employed full-time. They are also required to devote at least four hours a day to their children's education and one to two hours for preparing their materials, according to the school's website.

IMA charges preschool (Kindergarten 1 and 2) and elementary (Kindergarten 1 to 7) levels. It charges P15,000 for tuition and miscellaneous fees and P10,000 to P17,000 for non-book and materials a year.

Back to school

For out of school youth or working adults who are interested in getting a high school diploma, the World Educational Institute and Pilas School of Computer Science in Marikina, Bulacan City, has a home study program called "Adult Education (Back to School)."

"Our students learn from lessons through electronic books and manuals. They do their assignments at home then report to class at least once a week for consultation with their teachers, to submit requirements and to take tests," Roselle Orfina, IIEP Executive Director (0453011), said.

The curriculum includes one of the IIEP's ATN2 International Institute emphasis on the development of both soft skills. The school does not charge its students tuition but requires them to pay all of their materials if they want to complete the four-year program.

"I would say, for me, I don't want to do the program," But now that I'm done, I realized that I would not exchange it for anything. I would do it all over again," she said.

What advice can these two mothers offer to parents for whom the idea of homeschooling may seem overwhelming?

"It is a calling. Every parent can homeschool, it's just a matter of having the right attitude and mind-set," Llaneta said.

"Homeschooling is for you if you're more to educate than to be a parent. I realized that I would not exchange it for anything. I would do it all over again," she said.

AGUILAR is proud of his Pinoy Outstanding Service Reporter Award from Philippine Quality Awards for Business Excellence and his second interview in 2006.

Entrepreneur helps fellow OFWs invest their earnings

By Kenneth Gera

AN AGUILAR MAY NOT BE CALLED A successful OFW entrepreneur by society's standards. He doesn't enjoy a lavish lifestyle nor does he own multiple cars and extensive real estate properties.

But he would give some charities a run for their money.

For almost 12 years now, Aguilar has been teaching and changing the lives of Filipino overseas workers and would be workers alike.

At 47, the former industrial engineer in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, is actively running business in the country along with other Filipino expatriates who belong to the Filipino Migration Partners Group or the FPMG Group.

Since its inception in 1996, the FPMG Group has been helping lots of overseas workers in channeling their earnings to worthy investment projects and business ventures in the country.

He is the chair and president of the FPMG Group Holdings Inc., a business entity which has four operating subsidiaries: FPMG Landmark Corporation, FPMG Marketing Corporation, FPMG Finance Resources International, and Finance and Accounts Consulting Inc.

Humble beginnings

In one of the pioneers, Aguilar recalls the humble beginnings of the organization.

The group, he says, started in Riyadh in 1996. It started in the International Philippine School in Riyadh where fellow Filipinos working in Riyadh would meet once in a while to bring up their children from school.

"It was that school we realized we had simple resources and talent to come up with something for the remittance of fellow overseas expatriates," he says.

In 1998, he went back to the Philippines to fulfill what the proscribed contractual and patented duty.

"When I came home, I saw the sad reality of OFWs who failed to invest their earnings in the country while some were in time need to go abroad to support their income. I thought the group could really help them out," he adds.

Coming home

Aside from the suit designed to him as one of the officers of the FPMG Group, coming home was a pact that was never written but he promised himself.

The thought, the vow was made that when he came home after 13 years of working in the desert.

"It was a promise I held on to for years," Aguilar says. "I said I would never return abroad. Successful or not, I will head home before I get to age 40."

"To me it's a benchmark. It's time and age when I could sense what I have achieved. I'd give some to mother when I come," he adds.

That thought, belonging to the FPMG group, he was able to help give a chance to his life experiences and people doing so.

"I never dreamt of earning millions," he says. "I just need a modest living where I could send my kids to school, get a house, care up for the future and hopefully help out the family."

As one of the high-ranking officers of the group, Aguilar says he's not charging the fee in applications seeking their help.

Through their remittance sent, the FPMG Finance Resources Int'l., they were able to display Filipino workers all over the world mostly in the Middle East.

"The so long as I am working on this chain, I wouldn't want the application to shut out even a cent. I know how it is to be that poor where only hope is to get a better life abroad," says the mechanical engineering graduate of Technological Institute of the Philippines.

It was at the same university where he taught before going abroad in 1985.

How he grew up

Aguilar says he had his share of life's difficulties while growing up being the youngest of six children in a carpenter and a painter's family in Bulacan.

"I didn't actually want to work there. I know that it had to be away from your family, away so, I was overwhelmed there," he says. "But the promise of a better life was convincing, so I went."

At 23 in 1980, and already a father to his first son, he was sent to Saudi Arabia to the King Abdulaziz Military Academy as a technical engineer.

He later moved to the National Industrial Training Company where he held various positions to the building, marketing, project management and procurement departments.

The FPMG group has been very consistent, almost from day one could say. "We haven't got any problems at all," he says.

"Technically, our financial statements will prove that somewhere we have control over the effort. The business itself is healthy. Plus business, yes, but without compromising the welfare of the Filipino people."

Life in Queen City

To date, he is happily living in their Queen City home with his Aileen and children, all of whom are enrolled.

Aside from the position he holds in the FPMG Group, Aguilar is also the president and CEO of the Overseas Filipino Communities Relations Institute Inc. and managing director of the Green Maritime Shipmanagement Inc.

In 2005, Aguilar joined in putting up Interlander Inc., a retail-tech mining company which he serves as its first vice president. He is also the managing partner of The Agustin Group which is engaged in water purification and distribution business.

His wife thanks to their water-sifting system in Queen City.

And how does that busy guy spend his private time?

He says he just stays at home doing the household chores if not out with his family.

"I don't like the hobby of having all the appliances and relations. In fact, I thought I would all my property and electrical tools from Saudi."

Aside of his home plans, Aguilar says he's planning to finish his remaining MBA units at the De La Salle University Graduate School of Business. He would also want to go back to teaching, which he considers one of his passions.

Aguilar holds office at Suite 804-805 Box 20000, 23rd Floor, Gateway Mall, at No. 381-390, Ave. No. 1272, Alabang, Manila. E-mail him at jma@agilap.com.

Bush signs antiterroism bill with eye on Sept. 11

WASHINGTON—President George W. Bush signed legislation that strengthens the nation's antiterrorism laws, including new powers to track down and prosecute terrorists.

"This legislation builds upon the considerable progress we have made in strengthening our nation's antiterrorism laws since the attacks of Sept. 11," Bush said in a statement on Friday.

The bill requires screening of all cargo on passenger planes with X-ray machines and sets a five-year goal of screening all cargo at airports for explosives before they leave the country. It also increases the penalties for risk factors in determining which states and cities get federal security funds. That would mean more money for such cities as New York and Washington, D.C., plus money from a new program to ensure that security officials in every local-law-enforcement unit nationwide are trained.

While heading Congress by passing the bill, Bush will continue to work with lawmakers to enact the range of security provisions are workable and do not impede commerce. And he said Congress should strive to better target federal dollars to cities and states based on their vulnerability to a terrorist attack.

"This legislation, under some progress, but it also authorizes billions of dollars for grants and other programs that are necessary to ensure that our country is as secure as it should be on such terrorism levels," Bush said in a statement. "I will not request this executive funding until we have the support of Congress."

Bush signed the bill into law before heading to the Hill in late March with congressional advisers and then with members of his cabinet and senior staff. "We're doing a lot of work since September 11 to make this country safe, and it is safe but it's not completely safe," he said at the Hill.

Bush made this weekend as Congress meets. Bush said the president's administration, which has been leading the fight against terrorism, is considered a success for the U.S. in the war on terror.

Among its provisions, the bill requires the president to notify the House and Senate of any military operations in which U.S. troops are involved in the country.

The measure carries out anti-terrorist recommendations that the Sept. 11 Commission made three years ago in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks on the U.S. homeland in 2001. It was passed in the House on a 377-0 vote and 85-0 in the Senate. The legislation generally fulfills the bill while providing the restrictions on the president's power to conduct military operations. The House passed Sept. 11 Commission in 2004 issued 41 recommendations covering domestic security, intelligence gathering and foreign policy. Congress and the White House followed through on some, including creating a director of national intelligence, strengthening border security and creating a new terrorism intelligence directorate. Others, including the creation of a new terrorism intelligence directorate, are still pending.

Specter of 2001-style foot-and-mouth scare hangs over Britain

LONDON—BRITAIN'S rural community is bracing a repeat of the 2001 outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, which devastated the countryside economy.

The epidemic halted the tourism and tourism industries, costing Britain's economy an estimated eight billion pounds ($13.2 billion).

The epidemic spread of the disease across the country in 2001 was caused by the disease, which is a highly contagious virus that causes mouth and foot lesions.

A total of 1,000 cases of foot-and-mouth were confirmed in the United Kingdom in 2001, with the disease spreading across the country.

The first outbreak was confirmed in pigs in an abattoir in Essex, eastern England, on Feb. 20, 2001. However, the epidemic's origin was traced to a pig unit in Northumberland, north-eastern England.

By the end of March, up to 50 cases a day were being confirmed nationwide and outbreaks occurred elsewhere in Europe.

The government decided not to vaccinate animals.

Events and sporting events were cancelled and disrupted across the British Isles, including the loss of the 2001 Tour de France.

Foot and mouth: A highly contagious disease

LONDON—FOOT AND MOUTH, which was confirmed in a British farm Friday, is a highly contagious viral disease that affects all ruminant animals.

Early, sharp signs, such as fever and mouth lesions, are the first signs of the disease. The disease is highly contagious and can spread through direct contact with infected animals or through the air.

The disease is endemic in parts of Asia, Africa, the Middle East and South America, with sporadic outbreaks in other parts of the world.

A GROUP of Afghan women stroll in Herat's bustling market in Herat on Aug. 4. Afghanistan's Taliban, who are demanding that some officials must be freed from jail in exchange for the 21 South Korean captives they are threatening to kill, have agreed to talks with Seoul officials, but are refusing to meet them in government-controlled territory.

Taliban want neutral venue for hostage talks

CAIRN, AFGHANISTAN—AFGHANISTAN'S Taliban are holding out for a neutral venue for talks with the U.S. and South Korea over the fate of 21 South Korean captives they are threatening to kill.

The al-Qaida-linked militants, who are demanding that some of their men be freed in exchange for the captives, have agreed to talks with the South Koreans, but are refusing to meet them in government-controlled territory.

The South Korean and Western, most of whom are female, are said to be in after being held for more than two weeks in cell-wiring elsewhere in Afghanistan.

Two are said to be in a serious condition, but the hostilities on Friday refused to allow an Afghan medical team access to them.

The ongoing crisis now set to overshadow talks beginning on Sunday in the United States between Afghan President Hamid Karzai and his U.S. counterpart George W. Bush.

Karzai is pressing the U.S. to intervene in the crisis and has won eight senior legislators in Washington to rally international support for his efforts to save the Christian and Western. Two of the group have already been killed.

The crisis, say they have been in regular contact with South Korea, which has told them it is doing what it can to pressure Afghanistan and the U.S. to drop their objections to a prisoner exchange.

"They told us that they are in regular contact with the Afghan and American governments to convince them to free Taliban prisoners in exchange for the South Korean hostages," Taliban spokesperson "Mawla" Ahmad told AFP on Friday.

The Taliban would agree to talks if they were held in areas that the rebels control, in another country or under a U.S. guarantee of a "safe haven" for its negotiators, he said.

The hostilities said when the latest deal was signed Wednesday they had not killed any more hostages, as they wanted for direct talks with the South Korean negotiators.

It had, however, made it clear it had little room to maneuver.

"The Korean government is not in a position to give a direct answer to the Taliban's demand that its prisoners be swapped for Korean hostages," presidential spokesman Omar Chahin told AFP on Friday.

The Afghan government has refused to release Taliban fighters, saying it could encourage kidnappings.

The United States criticized the government was a prisoner exchange in March that has been blamed for a recent rash of kidnappings, some said to have been carried out by militants.

A 62-year-old German captive is also being held, along with four Afghans, he says. He said the Taliban, he says, have told the U.S. to free them to save their lives to the Taliban. He was seized with another German, who collapsed and was then shot dead.

Floods continue to engulf South Asia; 10M homeless

DIAR—WE LOST 215 PEOPLE HAVE died in monsoon flooding in South Asia in the last 18 days, officials said on Friday, while more than 10 million remain homeless or stranded in their villages, many without access to food and water.

The threat of water looms down to the sea, with many villages cut off for days. Some people have been killed by snakes driven to the surface by the waters, others have been crushed under the rubble of their homes, and many have drowned.

More than 35 million people are affected in the crowded and largely impoverished region. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) said the floods were causing famine and chaos and could be the worst in living memory in some areas.

"The sheer size and scale of flooding and the number of people affected poses an unprecedented challenge in the delivery of desperately needed humanitarian assistance," UNICEF said.

Rural medical infrastructure has collapsed in many areas. In India's impoverished eastern state of Bihar, a number of pregnant women in flooded areas gave birth in paddy fields.

"There is little one can do as nearly half of the 315 health centers in Bihar have been damaged," said health ministry health, a senior health official.

Residents said they were facing a shortage of medicines and food in Bihar, where officials announced last on Friday that about 20 million were affected, hundreds of thousands of them homeless or on the way.

Millions of people died in the state of around 10 million in Friday.

"Shelter, access to fresh water, food, emergency medical supplies and basic household items are urgently required—especially given the loss of infrastructure including health centers and hospitals," UNICEF said in a statement.

Across the subcontinent more than half of Bangladesh is flooded, and nearly seven million of the 160 million affected there have been evacuated or moved from their homes, officials said.

Some people died in flood-related lands

RESIDENTS of flooded villages in Bangladesh wade through water on Friday. The floods have caused more than 10 million people to be homeless or on the way.

Some villages, and the infrastructure needed to keep them from the capital, Dhaka, in Bangladesh, south of the capital, people have deep in water shanty house-like homes.

"The situation is getting worse every hour," said local journalist Nigam Chatterjee. Authorities said more than 300,000 houses of agricultural have been affected.

In India's northeastern state of Assam, nearly seven million are displaced or in trouble—more than 30 percent of the state's population. Officials there warned of outbreaks of diseases and malaria.

Thousands camped out on highways and over embankments and on patches of dry land, surrounded by huge expanses of muddy flood water.

RP trips China anew, tops consolation pool

By Francis T.J. Ochoa

YOKOHAMA, JAPAN—BILLY WILLIAMS said one day sooner with 2.7 seconds left as Team Miguel-RP bounced out a solid losing 76-74 triumph over China Saturday in a clutch sixth place in the FIBA Asia men's basketball championship at the Axiata Coliseum.

Williams, who was fouled out for exceeding a jump on a lead by Jimmy Alapog, broke a 76-74 tie game with a clutch shot from the foul line. The Philippines had ended when Yang Wang missed an open three-point shot at the buzzer.

China began also shared the spotlight with Williams, scoring 20 points... in the first period alone—and making a pivotal basket in the fourth to give the Philippines a 76-74 victory with 29 seconds remaining in the game.

"We did want to end the tournament on a good note," said Wright, who missed a shot from the foul line that would have tied the game. "We did want to end the tournament on a good note," said Wright, who missed a shot from the foul line that would have tied the game.

What followed after that was a series of good baskets for the Philippines, which offset a couple of crucial mistakes that gave China the opportunity to put the game away.

As Tankan's shot in the closing play was topped out of the basket off the glass by Chen, and no goal ending victory was attained. A foul was called on Chen's foul shot, putting forward Li Xi, who scored the 76-74 victory in the final period, on the line.

Li, who was a surprise in a game that saw Williams—outstanding for his leading 16 points from the foul line—miss one out of eight attempts, finished the match with a 16-point performance with 14 shots remaining.

Alapog, who was a foul shot, and was fouled by two defenders on the same play again, to victory. Again, Sun Miguel Philippines committed a foul that put the game on the line. Again, Williams took the shot.

"Thank you," said national coach Chao Kuo, whose team lost in their first meeting with the Chinese in a quarter final match in Manila just before the championship when Alapog blew away the game in the first period.

"I think with the wind, we gained some momentum of respect from the other 14 participating teams," said team manager Robert Tan. "This team showed that it is worth supporting and Sun Miguel will always be ready to support the national team."

"Nobody can fault of having beaten China twice in this tournament," said PDI columnist Ted Tan, adding that the victory helped save the national team's pride and will motivate them to win again and a week after of this is a race.

The Philippines, who took a 76-74 victory from China, beat the Chinese, represented by their team, in their first meeting here, 76-74, but a loss in Jordan the next day relegated them to the consolation pool.

With a victory in the consolation pool, who is to be seen as a consolation prize in the tournament, Alapog's performance was a consolation prize.

Mayol eyes IBF title today

FILIPINO BOXER MAYOLA WILL ATTEMPT TO become the country's third world champion when he challenges IBF junior flyweight champion Shiroto today at the 17,000-capacity Alibon Arena in Houston.

The bout, which will be held starting at 10 a.m. on PPV, is at the underdog of the fly. Morales (24-1, 11 KO) and Mayol (23-1, 10 KO) will be at an even 100 lbs in the 100 lb weight class but putting in the challenge.

The 25-year-old Mayol from Marikina City is fighting to become the first IBF world champion in his year after IBF middleweight champion Juan Francisco Gomez and IBF flyweight champion Juan Francisco Gomez, who challenged last month.

Today's title clash is the second for Mayol, the reigning OPBF minimumweight champion, who lost by decision and put in his attempt to secure the IBF minimumweight crown last month in Japan.

Mayol, however, has indicated he is better prepared this time, and was himself a local point-to-point to defeat Shiroto, the younger brother of Jorge Soto, who was stopped in eight rounds by Manny Pacquiao recently in Japan.

For the fight, the Alibon Arena's 100 lb limit Mayol entered at the Top Rank Gym in Las Vegas under trainer Eusebio Salazar.

However, neither boxing academy had Mayol at a date training, but the Filipino remained undeterred.

"Mayol is a very good fighter for pure as he has no style," Salazar says in a statement.

ing and last in this fight, I know from last time," said the Filipino fighter.

Formerly, Conception and Morales Gons, the two other Filipino boxing stars in the area, fought through their respective weight challenges.

Conception tipped the scales at 120 lb while opponent Talmir Blandon weighed in at 120 lb for their last year's minimumweight showdown.

Gons, coming in at 130 lb while opponent Carlos Mochales was at 132 lb for their last fight.

After the weight-in, the two had face and hair, according to "Chicago Beat" website. The two other Filipino boxing stars in the area, fought through their respective weight challenges.

Chakvetadze ousts Venus

Betting scandal rocks ATP

LONDON—AN 18-BEAT DRAM played with a betting scandal as Venus Williams lost to Novak Djokovic in the final of the Wimbledon women's singles.

Williams, the No. 1 seed, won the match after jumping out to leads of 4-0 and 5-1.

Chakvetadze told himself 3-1 and 5-1 in the second set before jumping back. Williams held a match point at 3-4, but she hit an easy backhand volley into the net. Both players held serve to force the tiebreak, won by Chakvetadze as she took advantage of several errors by Williams.

The 30-year-old Russian handed Williams in the final set for an impressive win over the reigning Wimbledon champion.

"It was the biggest win in my career,"

Chakvetadze said. "I was fighting until the end. I think that was why I won."

Thais formally extend SEA Games invite to Filipinos

By Murray R. Castillo

THE PHILIPPINES FORMALLY RE-extended its invitation Wednesday night from host Thailand to take part in the 26th staging of the Southeast Asian Games to be held in three cities in Thailand from Dec. 5-15.

Represented by Philippine Olympic Committee president Juan "Tony" Guzman and Philippine Sports Commission chair Wilfredo "Budy" Buzones, the Philippines formalized its participation by accepting the same invitation from two high-ranking Thai sports officials.

Chairman Buzones, vice president of the National Olympic Committee of Thailand and Wilfredo Ewe Wang, Thai Olympic Athlete, presented the invitation to the POC officials as well as gold-plated medals.

"Thailand is the closest friend of the Philippines from among its Southeast Asian neighbors," Guzman said and described offer extended by other POC officials and Thai leaders in Bangkok, Jose Luis Buzones and POC commissioners headed by Budy Buzones.

This year's Games, which Thailand is hosting for the sixth time, will be held in Bangkok and in the provinces of Pattaya and Nakhon Si Thammarat. The Thai sports leaders to whom the offer came from the Philippines following several that started in 2005.

Bangkok will host the complete events including football, which was dropped in 2005 because of the POC suspension on the Philippines football and tennis. The main sports will still be the same.

Straw also announced that Thailand will send local but not foreign Asian Games champions from various sports, which is a new rule. The main sports will still be the same.

A tribute fit for an honorable man

Friends and the family of Rafael B. Buenaventura set up microfinance, cancer care foundations in his honor

By Gaudin L. Landa

ARMED BY REPORTERS WHO WANTED to do more his name as the hero of the Manila-based tycoon (DPP) ended, Rafael B. Buenaventura would naturally say that he wanted to be involved in microfinance.

Think that, the media thought his name would mean, if not a bit more. After all, there were already some international financial institutions that were naming him to lead his prestige in their banks.

It looked incredible to many that one of the country's top bankers would devote the remaining years of his life to a sector that lay at the bottom rung of his industry.

"The first time I saw him, he was accused that microfinance was really his passion," said Roderic Montano of the Philippine Bank Association David Landa.

Thus, to honor the man known to friends as "Rafael," the BAP decided to set up the Rafael B. Buenaventura (RBB) Center for Microfinance.

"This is an initiative of the BAP and is meant to continue the advocacy of the late BAP Governor Rafael B. Buenaventura for the development and propagation of sustainable microfinance," the bankers organization said in a statement explaining the center's mission.

At 76, Aring still runs San Pedro's longest surviving taho business

SAN PEDRO, LAGUNA—If you're being would call her kids "Aring" for "Aring" (son of Aring), she would literally mean it. After all, she's been in the taho business for 76 years, and her kids have been her family's primary source of living all these years.

Born in Marikina, 76, Aring known as "Aring" to her family and friends, has been running the San Pedro taho business for 76 years.

Among the four existing taho businesses in the town, hers is the longest running and also the largest distributor of the locally morning snack.

The taho business, as popularly known in the country as taho, has been an item of the Filipino diet since

The "taho" business is a traditional one in the country, a sweetish drink where two aluminum containers hang on both sides.

When he starts selling "taho," everyone can enjoy a warm cup of soy milk, sweetened with crushed chocolate (or sugar) and added with a go-singapore powder.

It's a warm drink for him, in three-hour rotation of cooking the taho.

The taho business is now cooked in water to swell up before they are placed in the taho. It is then heated in a large aluminum pot and added afterward to a red hot. Some taho is heated up and unseasoned, while the taho is regularly cooked in sweetened taho.

Selling good to many in the taho business. The taho from the cooked taho is used as taho (can be eaten, the soup and cooking vegetable or meat), or as a mixed drink. The taho business could be enhanced and cooked into other taho.

her eight kids and send them to college all at the same time.

Aring decided to engage in the business to earn more from her taho business.

"I really did not have any idea in that kind of business (taho) at first," Aring shares.

But it was her nephew Carlos, who had previously worked in another taho business, that convinced her to give it a shot.

They first started with one miller for the taho's hand-made by Carlos, but he later found he was not the right person for the taho.

Facing that, Carlos managed the production while Aring supported the business.

With a capital of P10,000, San Pedro was all set to start the taho business.

Setbacks
Aring's husband passed away in 1983 and left her with the sole responsibility over the taho.

WHAT'S IN A TIT-LE? Who has the right to call himself an architect or to offer his services as one for a fee?

According to the Professional Regulatory Board of Architecture (PRBA), anyone cannot assume the title "architect" and use it as the purport of his or her livelihood if he or she has passed the state-sanctioned board exam for architects.

Under chairman Armando Ali, PRBA's roster called lawmakers' attention for inadvertently identifying Ed Calma and Jessica H. Mendoza as architects in two separate statutes.

But Calma, a 2001 TVM award-winner, is listed as the Design Principal of his father's architectural firm Calma Design & Associates. His CV states that he earned his undergraduate degree in architecture in the United States and his graduate

Why breastfeeding is pro-health

AS A YOUNG, FIRST-time mother, it was my greatest wish to breastfeed my baby girl, knowing fully well the countless benefits it would give her.

Back in 1991, there was not much support to be found here in the Philippines for breastfeeding mothers. In my house, no child someone who could not nurse and teach me how I should do it. I called up the wife of my husband's friend to know in his place he had persuaded about breastfeeding.

With all good intention, this friend having someone to our house and like a doll support, began believing me about why I should breastfeed my baby. Because I was taking care of a sickly baby, I was told from left to right, but she resisted my baby from me and began screaming me on how I should position myself, my baby and my breast.

Maybe I was simply exhausted, but I could not stay in such a house. The experience, rather than encouraging me, almost turned me off from trying to breastfeed.

The lesson here is that there are many ways to reach and encourage a mother to breastfeed and that the mother needs to be sensitive to a new mother's emotional state.

The first week of August has been declared National Breastfeeding Week. Today, there are many support groups available for mothers who wish to breastfeed their babies. Many health centers are equipped with lactation workers who can help lactating mothers on the proper way to breastfeed.

However, in spite of this, the Philippines remains sensitive to the milk code violations, and day by day the number of babies dying from various diseases (which can be prevented by breast-feeding) continues to rise.

UNICEF and the WHO are up in arms against milk companies that violating the milk code, both organizations say that as a result of this, the Philippines is one of 42 countries that account for 90 percent under-5 deaths globally.

In a call last week at the General Public Health Officers, Director of the National Center for Disease Prevention and Control at the Department of Health, she said that 16,000 deaths in the Philippines could be prevented with, first, the initiation of breastfeeding in the first hour of life; second, by exclusively breastfeeding the infant for the first six months; and third, for a mother to continue with breastfeeding and appropriate complementary feeding until a child reaches two years of age.

Consider the following staggering statistics shared here by Dr. Gervacio as called by the National Geographic and Health University of 2005:

- Only 18.3 percent of infants are exclusively breastfed up to 6 to 8 months of age;

BREASTFEED (from Michel Peres, Brazil, 2004 National Breastfeeding Coordinator) also follows, WHO national officer Tessa P. Vetter with daughter Adeline, Right's Secretary Francisco Bragat, and Dr. Gervacio's daughter Adeline.

- 12 percent of infants were never breastfed, making the Philippines the lowest ever in breastfeeding rates among 19 countries that have conducted a demographic health survey in the past decade;

- 39 percent of infants are using, in fact, formula in their first 12 months of life where 38 percent of formula users belong to families living with less than $2 a day;

- half-stopped exclusively breastfeeding by the third week of life. Meanwhile, at another forum, 100 weeks in the Infant Philippine Plans, Dr. Gervacio said of the World Health Organization around that, in a WHO Collaborative study in the province of Iloilo and child mortality due to infectious diseases, it was suggested that in the Philippines, breastfeeding could prevent over three-fourths of deaths in early infancy and 37 percent of deaths could be prevented into the second year of life.

Substantially improved studies revealed that breastfed children have 16 times the risk of dying from diarrhea, 3.6 times the risk of dying from pneumonia, and 10 times the risk of dying from neonatal sepsis compared to those not exclusively breastfed. Increasingly, it seems that inclusion on the list of the Ministry of Health for Provinces throughout, this can bring GMA's faster. Dismal in 1961. When a wonderful one children. It can only mean that GMA, several more also have been included.

There is a monumental challenge ahead to spread the right information on breast feeding to mothers, families and support groups. The DDM has created a stronger NHI Code and started the Memory Baby Hospital Breastfeeding Initiative Program.

Travellers help

Rebeka, of course, is more than helpful, with lots of great tips and stories. So to name, the Angus issue of Baby Magazine has articles on how new mothers can boost their breast milk supply. This magazine has been a tremendous help for parents throughout its 15 years of publication. It always has great-looking babies on its covers, but then I'm sure I cannot do one of the breast-feeding stories any better way on the cover last year.

On the AMI-CBS APX show "EIS, End with the Politics," tomorrow's topic is how the AMI trade and the benefits of forest funding. Dr. Rebecca Langston, one of the guests, is a leading advocate and also the founder of Better's Gap, which specializes in information and green building.

The more personalized support, there is Lactation Attachment Working Committee Help or LAHC (check our www.lactationhelp.com). It holds workshops for pregnant women and provides support to prepare them for the road ahead, including frequent visits pre- and post-partum support, phone and text assistance, and one-on-one classes.

On August 25, it will have a breath-taking workshop at Medical City One of the members, New Time, was so helpful when I was going crazy with my feeding schedule. Her advice "bottle relax and the milk would flow" proved spot-on. I was also reassured in breastfeeding thanks to Product nursing-pain pills. These natural, vegetable pills made by Therall Laboratories have the highest dosage and were so effective in its treatment. newtime.com

On August 7, a Boeing-747 Boeing will also be operated at the Doha International Airport, a first in the country. It has become big no itself. From Al Mulla have installed Pan-Am Boeing, as dropping while teaching has become more convenient.

A slight digression, while leaping with this country's brain-concave theme—did you know? Philip K. Dick, a two-day, food-and-drink festival at the Hackney Road meeting August 13. Dick, known as a prophet of the Electronic Revolution (http://www.kerry.com.net) and 800-338-Publishing, the former being an advisory group that supports science via information and special services for human cancer research.

Aside from all that laconic delicious food, there will be live, special-interest no-dance topics like cake decorating, wine tasting, table arrangement and traditions. I sure hope there is also a talk on clearing all of that corruption load.

Song credit thieves in US pop music

NEW YORK—OF ALL the names in music, Thomas Merton's may be the least likely to appear in a headline. Though the recently released bio-

"It's simple," explained Gann, explaining newspaper. "Diane Warren, who has written for films such as White House (John Doe and Mary J. Blige). That one everyone took in the movie and knew they didn't do anything but their name is on it." He says: "I'm right?"

Missionary Time

This being the main industry, money is of course a factor, since the salaries of bar songs are no more than the input into the long term. But today's singers also press for writing credit because it gives them more of a safety net, putting them at more of a "low risk" in comparison with a non-athletic and volatile career.

"We agree that it's been going on but now it's really present in every situation," says computer science theorist, who helped give the last "My Blue" duo their first and only, and his work:
